

Stanley Baldwin Gives An Insight Into The National Character Of The British People

Mr. Stanley Baldwin is one of the broadcasters in a series of talks on "National Character." He has himself in a marked degree the characteristics commonly ascribed to the English. He ought to be able to speak with authority. It is not necessary to follow him in his journey from Britain under the Romans. What is the English character now? No discovery about it is to be expected. Who could stomach an Englishman that didn't grumble? Mr. Baldwin grumbles every day. "I do not worry and I keep cheerful." So do the English people. And they are "always serene in times of difficulty." That is a trait to be proud of. The English have had their senseless panics and scares, but Mr. Baldwin is justified in saying that "we have staying power; we are not flimsy."

When one remembers the years of unemployment and high taxes, one is forced to believe that the English have a good deal more worrying than Mr. Baldwin takes into account. Still, from "British pleigian," or whatever the English name is, Mr. Baldwin stands with their backs against the wall. While more emotional than he might be believed, Stanley Baldwin is the art of repression makes a brave show in days of disaster or of doubt—perhaps also of crying.

English humor and laughter are "stock" characteristics, in Mr. Baldwin's view. Over here the humorists call him a "British bulldog." Mr. Baldwin is a figure. "Kindness, sympathy, with the under-dog, love of me" are other distinctive English qualities. "I can be invincible," says Mr. Baldwin, "and I can be a coward." He says that they are also American, or that the English were long able to hide their cynicism from the Irish. The strong individuality of the Englishman is familiar. He likes to develop it. Mr. Baldwin is a man in this country may seem to be somewhat in a decline. Individualists as they are, the English know how to cooperate nationally. Americanism is now manifesting the same faculty. Our old friend, "ordered liberty," is a well known English expression. Many Englishmen, as many Americans in their own case, are often inclined to think that they are getting too little liberty and too much order. But let us hear Mr. Baldwin and share his hope:

With our permissiveness, with our love of ordered freedom, with our respect for law, with our respect for the individual and our talent for combining in service, indeed, in our strength and in our weakness, I believe from my heart that our people are fitted to pass through whatever trials may be before us, and to emerge, if they are true to their own best traditions, a greater people in the future than they have been in the past.

So may it be with America, though "respect for the individual" may be included among their conspicuous virtues.—New York Times.

Harbors And Isolation

Countries Just Now Have Little Use For Transoceanic Facilities

At Chelmsford it would appear that the new harbor improvements are not yet completed. The authorities would therefore seem to be a bit premature in worrying because the big steamship companies continue to make use of tenders instead of coming alongside the docks. It is now stated that some dredging remains to be done on the new channel.

A great new port at Chelmsford, extensive improvements at Southampton and pressure for longer piers in our own North River would at first have been quite out of the question. The times are so bleak. Why improve transoceanic facilities when all the nations are going to the dogs? Men seeking poverty and happiness in their own tub?

New docks and new giant liners may be folly, or may be the self-assertion of a healthy instinct against the vagaries of the times. There are 171 people willing to gamble on the chance that the nations may want to resume doing business with each other and visiting each other.—New York Times.

Mosses Puffed Their

Philip Hargrave, the 10-year-old genius, declared by music critics of Melbourne and Adelaide, Australia, to be a budding Mozart, has been given a new name. The name was not at the piano. The small hands have been insured for $5,000. In the Melbourne orchestra he may be given eight minutes each time to pock a few notes, and the critics say his technique is almost perfect.

Hitler's Policy Hurts Germany's Cutlery Trade

British Boycott Has made Sheffield Businessmen

When Herr Hitler turned British sympathies against him overnight by his inane "Jew-baiting campaign," his little reckoned "reaction" would ensue. One of them has taken the unpleasant form of a British boycott of German goods, as a direct result of which the great cutlery city of Sheffield is experiencing a boom it had not known since pre-war days. Cheap cutlery used to be a specialty of German firms, who flooded the British market with inferior goods against which the Sheffield metal either would or could not compete, the Sheffield factories being mainly equipped for high quality products only. The Germans deliberately went after the cheap market and undercut Sheffield with vast inferior goods which were not the less serviceable for a period.

Since then Sheffield has learned to make the cheap grade of goods without losing her reputation for the high-class goods. Now the anti-German boycott affords an opportunity for her to secure to herself a large share of a market hitherto held exclusively by German firms. The "Buy British" slogan has received an unexpected and vigorous impetus. It is quite conceivable that this may expedite it affects the cheap goods of other foreign nations as well. The net result will all bring credit to the British's sale. And there is a lesson in this that we in Canada may well take to ourselves. "Buy Canadian" is the first-rate slogan for us when it comes to competition from outside the Empire.—Montreal Star.

Royal Canadian Humane Society Recognizes Many Acts Of Bravery

Award of the Royal Canadian Humane Society's bronze medal for life-saving to Wong Kok Ling, of Plover, B.C., is announced, with a similar honor for Fred Scott Thomson, of Macklin, Sask.

The Field Chinese rushed to the Ocean Falls dock on July 21 to learn from Mrs. Marsh that her son Edmond had fallen in the water. The first rescue workers on the scene were ineffective and Ling jumped in, bringing up the lad on his first attempt. The water was 30 feet deep and icy cold.

Mr. Thomson received the award for the successful rescue of Miss Jessie Mackay and Miss Jean Elliott from drowning at Dillberry Lake, June 12, when they fell into the water from a sandy ledge in shallow water.

The Newspaper Habit

People Only Begone Daily Readers

At Yarmouth, England, on Sept. 14, 1883, two small boys, brothers, called at the office of the local evening journal and asked for a job selling papers. They were taken on, and that night sold six dozen each, and earned 1s. 6d. One of these brothers is the present Mayor of Yarmouth. The other is Alderman Ernest James Middleton, J.P., who was Mayor in 1923 and again in 1929. He is the head of a company with many branches engaged in the wholesale newspaper trade. In an interview on his fifty years in the newspaper trade, Alderman E. J. Middleton said that when he began his career, less than half the inhabitants could read, but the Board Schools were beginning their good work, and fathers took home the evening paper for their better educated children to read the news to them after tea. London papers were only taken by bookstellers and stationers, and a system was in vogue for sending out the Times for so long at 1d. per hire. Boys and a paper daily was then considered a luxury. It was Queen Victoria's jubilee in 1887, which caused people to interest in paper readers, national interest was keen, and persons who had begun to "kate" a paper formed the habit. The Board gave a great deal of the new custom.—London Times.

Disgraces With "Food Faddists"

Eat What You Like In Moderation Says Old Doctor

Est. What you fancy. This is the advice of a famous English physician, Sir James Crichton-Browne, and it was given after he had eaten an eight-course dinner given by the Institute of Certificated Grocers at which he was a speaker. He is 80 years of age. Sir James expressed strong disagreement with what he called "food faddists" and said he ate at what he liked and advised his patients to do the same—but in moderation. "About food the most earnest and fantastic nonsense is talked and written," Sir James said. "Every kind of food is alternately lauded as life-saving and denounced as the cause of disease. The faddists and the cranks are never at rest." This man has a good appetite, a clean plate and common sense may go on contentedly consuming the varied foods to which he has been accustomed without risk, he said.

Britain's New Problem

Dole Is Attracting Many Failures Back To Homeland

For thirty years Britain has sent abroad to seek their fortunes some 600,000 emigrants yearly. This has added the old country as well as the strid and enterprising migrants to other lands. There were failures, most of whom were there before they left their homeland. However, the tide has turned. For the first time no British subjects have left the homeland and 6,000 have gone back to the mother country. These constitute a problem there for the dole attracts some failures back voluntarily and some are deportees, undesirable anywhere.

A Bumper Apple Crop

Commercial Yield Is Estimated At 4,500,000 Barrels

A bumper crop of apples is being harvested in Canada this year. The total commercial yield for 1933 is placed at 4,500,000 barrels, an increase of 528,000 barrels over the 1932 production.

Of this year's commercial crop the Province of Nova Scotia will account for 1,540,000 barrels; British Columbia, 1,304,000 barrels; Ontario, 1,064,000 barrels; Quebec, 254,000 barrels and New Brunswick, 40,000 barrels. This year's yield in Nova Scotia is nearly 792,000 barrels more than in 1932. In Ontario the increase is 144,000 barrels compared with last year. In British Columbia the 1933 crop is less than in the previous year.

The total yield of pears this year will be 465,000 bushels, about the same as in 1932. Peaches will, it is estimated, return 825,000 bushels, or about 80,000 bushels below the 1932 production. Plums and prunes will yield 218,000 bushels, a decrease of 10,000 bushels. The total production of grapes is estimated at 44,881,000 pounds or 9,400,000 pounds below the yield in 1932.

Practically all the pears, peaches, plums and prunes grown in Canada for the commercial market come from the provinces of Ontario and British Columbia.

Complexity Of Rural Life

Farm Education Should Include Economic Problems

Modern agricultural education will fail to reach its full scope until it extends beyond the mere teaching of improved methods in production, according to Dean George Godfrey of the agriculture division at Iowa State College.

"Farming education should not only teach how to grow a bushel of corn or how best to raise a hog, but also how to market them to best advantage and what to do about it after the crop is marketed," Godfrey said.

When agricultural education is in its infancy the natural course is to pursue improved production methods, he explained. Production now is no longer paramount to the social and economic problems of agricultural life, he asserted.

One of the chief developments noted in agricultural courses of the modern day is insertion of courses showing students "how to get the most out of living," Godfrey declared.

Further cherishing trade reports

come from different quarters in London, England, on the heels of the declaration by Walter Runciman, Colonial Secretary of Trade, that Britain has attained the strongest financial position of any country in the world.

September trade figures showed an increase of 16,000,000 in exports over last year, while the greater part of a £3,000,000 increase in imports was in raw materials.

Further production of steel ingots and castings increased by 238,700 tons over the same month last year. Prince George, opening the motor show at the Olympic, pointed to an increase of 27 per cent domestic production and of 68 per cent in motor production for foreign trade.

Coincidentally, because of the strength of the London market, a £18,000,000 conversion loan for South Africa in 1934 per cent was snapped up immediately, the bids being closed within five minutes. This duplicated the experience with Canadian, Australian, British and New Zealand loans in the last few weeks.

Trade pact negotiations are to be opened by the British government with Spain and Italy. Mr. Runciman announced. Presumably these will be modeled along the pact already concluded this year, notably with Argentina and Scandinavia.

While a prominent feature of the pact negotiated with the Scandinavian countries was an undertaking to supply important British raw materials, Mr. Runciman said British cottons would be given chief attention next. "We are going to make a big effort to place that vastly important British on a satisfactory basis," he said. "After that we shall turn our attention to steel."

Will Be Spectacular Contest

Noted Pilots To Race 13,000 Miles For Big Money Prize

New year will witness the most spectacular event in the history of aeronautics, when world pilots will engage in a race across four continents for 13,000 miles from England to Australia for a big money prize.

Organized in connection with the Melbourne centenary celebrations, the race is expected to attract at least a score of noted pilots, who will endeavor to win the prize money of $75,000, put up by John MacRobertson, prominent Melbourne resident.

The race is to take place on Oct. 20, 1934, or thereabouts, and all entries must reach the centenary airport at Melbourne by June 1, 1934. The rules stipulate that the aircraft must reach Australia in 16 days or less to be eligible for the prize fund.

Fifty thousand dollars and a gold cup worth $2,500 will be awarded to the winner of the championship race. Second and third prizes, valued at $10,000 and $2,500, will also be awarded. There will also be a handicap race, for which two prizes of $10,000 and $2,500 will be awarded.

Each machine must carry food and water to maintain life for three days and some approved flotation gear for the crew. This applies to both races. These rules definitely rule out light planes from competing.

Pilots in the race will have to check in at Baghdad, Calcutta, Singapore, Port Darwin and Charleville.

Eighty thousand dollars and a gold cup worth $2,500 will be awarded to the winner of the championship race. Second and third prizes, valued at $10,000 and $2,500, will also be awarded. There will also be a handicap race, for which two prizes of $10,000 and $2,500 will be awarded.

New Glass Cannot Be Seen Through From Outside

At last people may live in glass houses without pulling the shades down.

A patent has just been granted to Frederick A. Deland, head of the local park and planning commission of Washington for a glass which is transparent only one way.

A person may look through the glass from the inside of his house and see as clearly as through ordinary window panes. People on the outside, however, cannot see through to the inside. This is caused by a diffusion of light rays by means of arranging glass materials on one surface at angles.

Among other patents granted recently are a self brushing toothbrush, a calculating machine advising farmers how much grain he should feed to his cows to get the maximum output of milk, a device which would keep the hole in the doughnut, a ventilated seat cushion, and a collapsible grave-stone.

New His Ancestors

During a history lesson in a suburban school, the teacher pointed out to the class that a surname often indicated the trade of the ancestors of those who bore the name. He gave the obviously simple examples of Smith, Taylor, Baker, and others.

Then he questioned one of the boys: "What were your ancestors, Webb?"

"Spiders, sir!"

Gaffer: "I suppose you wouldn't believe I once did a hole in one?"

Caddie: "Hour, day, week, or hundred, sir?"

Precautions Travel Is Blocking Railway Sale

Japan Not Anxious To Buy Line From Russia

"What with land and carrying away passengers for ransom, the Russian railway buildings were attacked to sell the Chinese Eastern Railway to Japan. Negotiations have been going on for months. Bids and counter-bids have been offered. The great stumbling block is the precarious state of travel on the line.

In two days the track was torn up five times, trains were set aside three times, railway stations were set aside three times, and 150 railway employees were kidnapped.

Armed gangs attack the trains and crimes of violence are frequent. There were 76 attacks by armed desperadoes in 1930, 119 in 1931, 704 in 1932, and this year there have been 247 attacks to date.

With all these goings on, the Japanese wonder what kind of a railway they are dicker for anyway. If the gangs and bandits keep up their activities there will not be much left. It is an indication of the lawless state in Manchuria and a condition with which the Japanese have been trying to cope. —Border Cities Star.

Working For Unemployed

Women of English Golf Club Make Clothes For Poor

Needles and thimbles displace drivers and nibbles once a week in the women's section of the North Middlesex Golf Club. For two hours each Monday women members must make clothes for the poor and unemployed. More than 140 new garments were made in the first fortnight. The idea of the sewing effort resulted from a speech of the Prince of Wales, who said, "If only every woman would work two hours a week for the Personal League what a marvelous response there would be."

Not So Healthy

"Health Week" was held in the prefecture of Hyogo, in Japan. Enthusiasm ran high and the occasion was celebrated by a public feast. Next day, 1,000 people were reported to be ill from food poisoning and three have died.

OCCASIONAL WIFE

By EDNA ROSE WEBSTER

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt, young and beautiful commercial artist, and Peter Anson, a struggling sculptor, meet in an art class and fall in love. She is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family, but she is not to share in their fortune when she comes of age. They are faced with the problem of "marriage or career" and Camilla does not want to let Peter down when he has so much promise as a sculptor. At an art school dance, Gus Matson, Peter's roommate, who is jealous of Peter's success, takes Camilla out on the lawn to tell her "something she should never hear about Peter." Gus tells Camilla that Peter is a cheat, that he only wants her money and that he, Gus, loves her more. At that moment Peter appears on the scene and knocks Gus flat. On the way home from the party Camilla tells Peter they are going to do something about their problem.

CHAPTER XIV

"We are going to be married, son, Peter, darling," Camilla told him. "Why—why, honey, we shouldn't dare to! Incredible!"

"Afraild, Peter?"

"For myself? No, of course not."

"For whom?"

"Why—for you! I couldn't take care of you."

"I shouldn't let you. I'll take care of myself—until you succeed."

"I couldn't let you do that," he protested with finality.

"Why couldn't you, Peter? I'll have to do that, anyway, whether I am your wife or not. Why can't I be your wife, too?"

"My wife!" he repeated, with awe.

"You would—take that chance, dear, before I have proved to you that I can do anything worth while?"

"I'd take bigger chances than that to have you and your money. Why not? Where is the risk?"

"Well—suppose I failed, after all? Suppose I never really amount to much?"

"You would still be my, gently. Yes, I suppose so."

"Well, Peter, it's you I love and want. Nothing else makes a lot of difference to me, except that I want for you everything that you want to be, for your sake as much as mine."

"Sweetheart!" he gave her a dramatic demonstration of his appreciation.

"What a girl!" he exclaimed and hugged her triumphantly. She clung to him, weak with emotion and reluctant to lose the sweet ecstasy with which it filled her. She was part of the night's beauty and silence and fragrance, there in his arms with his lips upon hers.

"Don't let me go!" she whispered.

"I wish I needn't—ever!" vehemently.

"Then why don't you want to marry me soon?"

"Want to! If I only dared!"

"Then you shall. And it won't make a bit of difference to either of us, financially. We shall live just as we had planned before we met."

"But I can't even provide you with a decent place to live," helplessly.

"You needn't. I just told you that we'll live exactly as we had planned, except that we don't have to belong to each other."

"You mean—not even live together?"

"That would be fatal to your work, Peter, and the last thing we should want is that. I should like to see you, financially. We shall live just as we had planned before we met."

"But I can't even provide you with a decent place to live," helplessly.

There's another thing about our waiting for years and years to marry. Do you remember what you said that first night we talked together, and about waiting a thing so intensely and so long that finally when you could have it, "you didn't want it?"

"Why, Camilla, you don't mean that we could change our minds over, about waiting for each other?"

"It could happen, Peter."

"Oh, sure, even lots of people who marry, change their minds about each other afterward. But not us."

"But that isn't what I mean, dear. I don't think we ever could do that. If we had each other and shared everything as we go along, we shall develop together then. But if we have to live on hope alone and go our separate ways, we may drift apart in our interests—well, and find that we are not what each other wanted. There's a phrase running in my head that someone wrote. The sickening pang of hope deferred? Doesn't that sound ominous?"

"Whatever it is, we are going to take no chances with it, Peter, dear."

"But, say," she held him off suddenly. "I'm doing all the arguing about this. It sounds as if I were trying to make you marry me against your will."

"Darling, you know that isn't me. You're only convincing me that you are willing to take a bigger chance with me than I have any right to ask of you. Yet I am selfish enough to ask you, even though I love you better than anything in life," he told her tenderly.

"Because you love me better than anything in life," she corrected him.

THE OLD ASSURANCE

Till winter's chill
White fingers still
The bloom and song of earth,
No heart can guess
The ravens' lyric mirth.

Until love goes
Nobody knows
What light it gave the lays,
What charm it lent,
What best content
It shed on all life's ways.

Yet, sweet, though soon
The flowers of June
In fragrant chain must be,
Cling close, keep near
And never fear
Our rose of love can die.

Launching Hunt For Fortune Of Castaway

Messages In Bottle Picked Up At Sea

Two messages in a bottle picked up on a lonely beach on the coast of Mexico have brought young P. Bradley to Washington to organize an expedition to seek for buried treasure.

The messages left of a Robinson Crusoe castaway, Chinese pirate shipwreck; escape with the treasure; the wait for death on a South Pacific lake.

So far, Bradley has found four people who are willing to take a chance on there being a buried loot on the other side of the world and have signed up under Bradley as an expedition.

The first message, dated August 18, 1897, reads:

"To whoever finds this which I am about to cast into the sea, help—I am cast away on an island whose latitude" (deleted by Bradley) "and longitude" (deleted by Bradley).

For three years I have been a prisoner of Chinese pirates, who have raided several pearlers and other vessels and have accumulated a vast amount of wealth, which I have saved from the south end of the island under a cross of red granite worth of gold and silver coins and a stone jagged over half full of pearls. Eleven per cent of the treasure is mine and 143 others that are over one-half inch in diameter. The rest are smaller.

Each month of immense size and much longer. So I only ask the finder to give one of the black pearls and $10,000 of the money to my little girl, Nellie Parley, who lives there with a Mrs. Susan McCarthy. In Stockton, Cal. Find her, please, and send it to her, and may God bless you.

"JAMES PARLEY."

"Aug. 18, 1897."

The second letter, with a map reads:

"There is no water on this island, which is very small, and I have no food. I am starving. I am a little girl when you get what I have hidden."

"But, say," she held him off suddenly. "I'm doing all the arguing about this. It sounds as if I were trying to make you marry me against your will."

Wales Wants Canadian Cattle

Fortnightly Service Of Cargoes To Be Resumed

A determined attempt is being made to revive Cardiff's import trade in Canadian cattle and to secure a regular fortnightly service of cargoes into the port.

During June a consignment of 540 head from Ontario and Saskatchewan arrived, and most of them were sold by private treaty. Donald Munro of Montreal, who handles the trade, said that Cardiff was finely situated to deal with this traffic and act as distributing centre not only for South Wales, but also for the Midlands and the south and west of England.

I present the only extensive imports of cattle from Canada are those into Glasgow and Birkenhead. If the new venture succeeds, the ships bringing the cattle will be loaded with South Wales products for the Canadian market.

Describes New Discovery

Oil Is Almost Pure Vitamin "A"

States Its Maker

A new, pale yellow oil, 9,200 times more potent than ordinary cod liver oil, has been produced by the Chicago (Ill.) section of the Chemical Society.

The oil is almost pure vitamin "A," said its maker, Prof. Harry N. Holmes, of Oberlin University. It represents America's stake in the international scientific race to be first in isolating vitamin "A," the disease-resistance builder.

At the university of Zurich, Dr. Eusebio Holmes produced a similar oil, 10,000 times as powerful as cod liver oil; while three Englishmen have reached vitamin "A" concentrations in similar oils 4,500 times and 800 times stronger than the fish oil.

Professor Holmes gets his vitamin "A" from halibut liver oil.

New Zealand Citizens Accomplish Big Task

Have Rebuilt City Of Napier Destroyed By Earthquake

On February 3, 1931, the city of Napier, in New Zealand, was completely destroyed by an earthquake which brought its buildings down to the ground, brick and stone.

21,000 old inhabitants, who had just begun to experience the benefits of settlement in one of the Dominion's latest towns, were ruined, their houses and their means of earning a living being swept away simultaneously.

Earthquake and fire demolishing public and private buildings. The Sunday after the quake a great public service was held in the open air at which the citizens of Napier pledged themselves to rebuild their city.

Today they have accomplished their self-appointed task. Upon the ruins of the old Napier a new city has arisen, the newest city in the world. Wide thoroughfares, commodious four-lane streets, public buildings of the most up-to-date character; new factories, banks and hotels are to be seen on every hand. And the new city has been built with an eye to harmony of architectural design and with the best of modern planning.

Narrow back streets have been eliminated. The old buildings have been replaced by modern standards have vanished from the streets into cellars. Napier is now a modern city, one of the most beautiful of the people of New Zealand and a model for others to copy who are busy building cities in the Empire. Town planning, well directed and controlled did it—Montreal Star.

Legend Of A Jewel

Famous Koh-i-Noor Diamond Has Strange History

The legend that if a British king ever wears the Koh-i-Noor diamond, India will be lost forever to the British Empire, is related in "Jewels of Romance and Renown" by Miss Mary Abbott.

When the gem, said to have adorned the sword of the warrior Afrasiab in 3000 B.C. was given to Queen Victoria by the annexation of the Punjab in 1849, the East India Company hinted that they would like her to wear as a piece of her personal jewelry rather than in the crown jewels.

80 Queen Victoria bequeathed the Koh-i-Noor to her son, King Edward, but to his wife, Queen Alexandra, and gradually the legend grew up that the Koh-i-Noor was a curse on India, having been well preserved in the silt at the bottom of the river.

Curse Well Preserved

Evidently dropped by a voyager more than a century ago, a copper coin or token struck in the year 1811 in honor of Sir Isaac Brock, has been recovered from the river bed of Bellefleur. The token was in perfect condition, having been well preserved in the silt at the bottom of the stream.

The King and Queen, who have so many tastes in common, do not share the same views about long train parades. Her Majesty is said to dislike travelling by night while the King considers it waste of time to travel in the daytime.

There is no fool like an old fool who tries to act like a young fool.

Little Helps For This Week

Does Not Harm the Heart

"God, even our Father, who has loved us and given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, comfort your hearts and establish you in every good word and work."

2 Thessalonians 2:16, 17.

When sorrow all our heart would ask, we need not shun our daily task. The herbs we seek to heal our ills. Familiar by our pathway grove, our comfort all is in them.

—J. Kelke.

When we turn away from some duty or some fellow creature saying our hearts are too sick and sore with some great yearning of our own, we may never see the line on which a divine message was coming to us. We shut out the man, and we shut out the angel who had sent him on to open the door. There is a plan working in our lives, and if we keep our hearts quiet and our eyes open all it works together and if we do not let it fight together and keeps on fighting till it comes right somewhere, somewhere—Annie Kruger.

Mail Stolen From Liner

Three Registered Sacks Disappeared Between New York and Plymouth

Three sacks of registered mail, said to contain several thousand dollars worth of negotiable bonds and other securities, were stolen while the liner "United States Line" ("Manhattan") was on high seas federal authorities admitted. The loss was discovered when the Manhattan, which left New York September 13, arrived at Plymouth, England, on September 18. The missing sacks were part of a shipment of 190 sacks. Those stolen were consigned to England, Holland and Poland.

Little Betty, watching the farmhands spreading out a stock of hay to dry, could contain her curiosity no longer, so she politely asked:
